

ELM PARK HORTICULTURAL GUILD

Originally named "The Elm Park Gardens Guild", the first show was in 1937. The Guild was reformed in 1948 and renamed "The Elm Park Horticultural Guild".

Julie writes "I really enjoy being a volunteer for the Elm Park Horticultural Guild.

On Sunday mornings between February and November you can see us at the Trading Huts next door to Elm Park Library from 9.30 am until noon.

Plants, garden sundries and advice are all available as well as community stalls run by local people.

There is a lovely atmosphere and an opportunity to join the Guild for £2 a household which enables you to purchase items at the huts, enter the quarterly shows and join in social occasions, days out and holidays."

Sunday morning at the Trading Huts

www.ephg.co.uk

The Guild has almost 1,000 members and welcomes volunteers and committee members of all ages.

The shows have home craft sections and categories for children to enter, so if you're not much of a gardener there are plenty of other things that may interest you.

Why not come along to the

Elm Park Horticultural Guild AGM

Monday 6 December 2021 at 7 pm

The Annexe, Elm Park Assembly Hall,
Eyhurst Avenue RM12 4RA

Mulled wine and mince pies will be served – hope to see y

Note from Stephanie:

There wasn't enough room in FOCUS in December for all I had written so I thought I would reproduce it on the website tagged on to Julie's page.

The last Sunday morning at the trading huts next to the library was held on 7 November. What a joyous community occasion it was. Apart from the committed volunteers of the Guild, Barry had a stall selling poppies for the RBL; there was a variety of community stalls and over the road, members of St Nicholas Church were putting up the cascade of poppies knitted by the community to decorate the church.

The true community spirit of Elm Park, long may it continue.

